CITEMENT ON A STEAMER.

e Colonial Beach steamer Queen and the Baltimore steamer Normberland ran side by side on their y up the river last night. A colored an employed on the Queen Anne lonned a life preserver while the race was in progress which caused some excitement, as the captains of the steamers had no idea of allowing them to danger. When a short distance south of Glymont the steamer St. Johns with excursionists from this city and Washington came along. This added to the anxiety, some of the Colonial Beach passengers supposing a head-on collision was imminent. The three steamers, however, soon got away from each other and about an hour later reached this port. During the excitement on the Queen Anne one lady fainted and a few others, mostly women and children, were no little alarmed. One or two of were about to jump overboard.

A SANE FOURTH.

The Civic Improvement League is actively engaged in arranging the details for a sane celebration of the Fourth. Special attention is called to the splendid advantages of George Washington Park for all day pienies. Old Fort Ellsworth will prove to be an attractive play ground for the children, and its historic interest to the grown ups is appealing. This was the first fort built in the civil war. The park management will have the grass trimmed off the slope and top of the beautiful site. The cottage at the top of the bill will be used as a rest and place for o'clock a ball game will be played and passed them they gave chase. The London county, and to Wash.
